Dena's been in love before she loved and lost a wonderful man twenty years ago. But she's moved on and made a name for herself as a professional photographer. She doesn't have time for romantic love. So when she's bowled over by a man at her son's church, why can't she get his image out of her mind? Wayne is a single father and confirmed bachelor, but he finds himself fascinated with the seemingly unattainable Dena. He's been perfectly happy through the years, raising his daughter alone, never leaving his small corner of the world. What could his quiet life offer a world-traveling photographer? Life's challenges draw the two ever closer, but can they resolve their differences?
